

LHOTSE (8516M) EXPEDITION

Climb world's fourth highest mountain

54 Days | 8516 meter

ABOUT THIS EXPEDITION

Lhotse, also called E1, is the world's fourth highest mountains (27,932 feet [8,516m]), consisting of three Himalayan summits on the Nepalese-Tibetan (Chinese) border just south of Mt. Everest, to which it is joined by a 25,000-foot (7,600-metre) ridge. The Lhotse climb is by many as one of the steepest faces in the world. It rises 3.2 km in just 2.25 km of horizontal distance.

The western flank of Lhotse is known as the Lhotse Face. Any climber who wants to climb the peak via standard route of South Col on Everest must climb this 1,125m (3,700ft) wall of glacial blue ice. This face rises at 40 and 50 degree pitches with the occasional 80 degree bulges. Two rocky sections called the Yellow Band and the Geneva Spur interrupt the icy ascent on the upper part of the face. This is a technically challenging route and will require solid climbing skills and experience. Both Mt Everest and Lhotse share the same base camp. In fact, Lhotse is a part of Everest massif itself.

Sherpa Shepherds' guiding approach on Lho differs notably from many other guide services as we intentionally keep our team small. Instead of running a large expedition with many climbers, we focus our attention on leading a more personal climbing team, concentrating our resources on each individual to ensure the safest, most enjoyable, and most successful experience possible for each one of our climbers. Our expedition is fully staffed and no extras or add-ons are needed. The smaller team ratios and thoroughly organized expedition facilitates better team dynamics, closer communication, individualized attention, and helps avoid the fragmentation inherent to larger expeditions. We believe this creates and most enjoyable climbing team possible.

For personal safety and success, excellent physical conditions are required. Prior to the trek we suggest physical activities such as running, swimming and cycling combined with climbs to smaller peaks which includes climbs that involves travel on crampons under all sorts of conditions. Be sure you are comfortable with extreme exposure and steep drop offs for long periods of time and capable of carrying heavy pack of an average of 30lbs. include plenty of technical rock and ice climbing experiences, so you are fairly comfortable following on alpine rock route. Be acquainted with jumars, ascenders, crampons, all your gear, and knot .We will review each climber's bio on an individual basis to help develop climbers interested in attempting Mount Lhotse.

Food

The more food you eat at altitude the better you'll perform.
